Roxbury, March 29, 1869.

Dear Johnson:

It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you the bearer of this, Edmund Quincy Remond, son of Mrs. Caroline Putnam of Salem, and nephew of Charles and Sarah Remond. After an absence of two years in Europe, he has been making a home visit, but intends leaving for the Continent in the course of a few days, making Vienna the place of his residence, and there pursuing his medical studies. While abroad, he would like to be an occasional correspondent for the Independent, if an arrangement can be satisfactorily made. He has a bright and active mind, and holds the pen of a ready writer; and I have no doubt would write very readable letters on topics that would be of present interest. He wrote a good deal for the Anti-Slavery Standard while he was in Europe, and acquitted himself very creditably both as to style and ability. His refinement of manners, and innate courtesy, and gentlemanly deportment cannot fail to commend him wherever he goes. I think he has a bright future before him, and that he will "make his mark" in the profession which he has chosen. He has my best wishes for his health and happiness, and it will give me both pride and pleasure to learn of his growing success.

Your attached friend,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

Oliver Johnson.
